What is an occupational accident?

An accident is regarded as any unexpected happening or event which results in a personal injury.

1. Where the accident arises in the course of a person's employment, it is presumed to have arisen out of that employment unless there is reason to believe that it was not caused by the employment.
2. However, an accident is also accepted as an occupational accident if it:
 - was caused by another person's misconduct, negligence or misbehaviour, or
 - was caused by the behaviour or presence of an animal (including bird, fish or insect), or
 - was caused by being struck by any object or by lightning,provided the insured person did not directly or indirectly cause or contribute to the happening of the accident by their conduct outside the employment or by any act not incidental to the employment.
Other situations included:
3. One which arises although the person may not have been acting in accordance with any statutory or other regulations applicable to the employment, or in accordance with instructions from their employer, provided it would have been deemed to have arisen from the employment otherwise and the act was done for the purpose of the employer's trade or business.
4. One which arises while the person is travelling, on an unbroken journey, to or travelling directly from their normal place of residence and work.
5. One which arises while the person is in or about any premises at which they are being employed for the purposes of their employer's trade or business and is taking steps, in an actual or supposed emergency at those premises to rescue, succour or protect persons who are, or are thought to be or possibly to be, injured or imperilled, or to avert or minimise serious damage to property.
6. One which occurs to an insured person, who is an apprentice, while they are in attendance at a technical school or other place for training or instruction (whether during ordinary hours of employment or otherwise), if their attendance at that school or place is with their employer's consent or is required by direction of their employer or under the contract of apprenticeship.

What is a prescribed occupational disease?

A prescribed occupational disease is one that has developed because of the type of work you do. It also includes any condition resulting from the disease. If you are suffering from a prescribed occupational disease, you may qualify for payment under the Occupational Injuries Scheme.

You may qualify for benefit if:

- you are suffering from certain prescribed diseases,
- you have been employed on or after 1 May 1967 in one of the occupations linked to that disease*
- the disease results from the nature of your employment.

*If your occupation is not linked to a prescribed disease (other than deafness) but if you can produce evidence to show that the disease was developed due to your employment, you may also qualify for benefit.

For further information and the full list of prescribed diseases visit www.welfare.ie

Who can be considered an “adult dependant” for Illness Benefit purposes?

An adult dependant can be a person who is wholly or mainly maintained by you, and is one of the following to you:

Spouse, Civil Partner, Cohabitant, Ex-spouse, former Civil Partner, or a person over 16 years of age who is caring for a qualified child of the claimant.

Where a married couple have separated or are divorced or where a Civil Partnership has been dissolved the claimant's ex-spouse or ex-civil partner may be regarded as an adult dependant where:

1. They are not cohabiting with another person
2. They do not have a weekly income in excess of the specified limit, and
3. You are paying weekly maintenance equal to or greater than the current rate of Increase for an adult dependant. For current rates visit www.welfare.ie

What are the income limits for an “adult dependant” for whom an increase may be due?

Your adult dependant must not have a social welfare payment in his or her own right except for:

Child Benefit, Disablement Benefit, Domiciliary Care Allowance, Foster Care Allowance, Guardian's Payment (Contributory) and (Non-Contributory), Half-rate Carer's Allowance, Occupational Injuries Death Benefit in respect of an orphan, and/or Supplementary Welfare Allowance.

Your spouse, partner, or cohabitant cannot have gross weekly earnings or income (before tax and PRSI deductions) of more than €310. If your adult dependant earns less than €100 you may get a full increase for an adult dependant (Increase for Qualified Adult or IQA).

If your adult dependant earns between €100 and €310 you may get a reduced rate of IQA (sometimes called a tapered rate of IQA). If your adult dependant is earning more than €310 you will not get an IQA but may still qualify for half rate increase for qualified children if the earnings are not more than €400.

To calculate average income for your spouse/civil partner/cohabitant follow these guidelines:

Unpaid leave from employment;

Where the spouse/civil partner/cohabitant avails of either paid or unpaid leave, in estimating the revised gross weekly income of the spouse/civil partner/cohabitant, regard should be had to the level of income likely to be received by the spouse/civil partner/cohabitant in the coming year.

Where this information is not available, income for the coming year should be estimated by reference to income in the 52 weeks to the end of the leave period.

Example:

While employed the spouse/civil partner/cohabitant has a weekly income of €400.00. S/he takes unpaid leave for 13 weeks from 1st June 2016. In order to calculate the amount of earnings which s/he is likely to receive in the 52 weeks from the start of the leave, his/her weekly income should be multiplied by 39 (52-13) and divided by 52.

To calculate average income for your spouse/civil partner/cohabitant follow these guidelines (continued):

Income from employment, maintenance, rental/letting income, pensions from other countries or occupational pensions;

The gross income figure is used, no deductions are allowed in respect of, for example, tax, PRSI, superannuation and the Universal Social Charge (USC) etc.

Where earnings are received at monthly intervals, the weekly average over the previous 2 months should be taken. To convert this to a weekly average add the total for the two months together, multiply this figure by 6 to give a yearly average, and then divide this figure by 52 to get your average weekly figure.

Where earnings are received four weekly, the weekly average over the previous 8 weeks should be taken. Where earnings are received weekly or fortnightly, the weekly average over the previous 6 weeks should be taken.

Note, if the standard period was unrepresentative, a longer period should be chosen. Or if the employment has just started, the current earnings should be assessed.

Income from self-employment (including farming);

Weekly income from self-employment should be estimated by reference to the income received in the last complete tax year i.e. annual total receipts less work-related expenses divided by 52.

Income from property (not rented), savings, investments, stocks or shares;

For property or land, the capital value is the current market value less any outstanding mortgage. For stocks or shares, the capital value is the total number of stocks/shares multiplied by the number held. For savings or investments, the capital value is the total amount held in the account or investment fund.

Note, a weekly income value is then calculated by the department as follows:

First €20,000 equals weekly income of Nil,

Next €10,000 equals weekly income of €1 per €1,000,

Next €10,000, equals weekly income of €2 per €1,000,

Excess of €40,000 equals weekly income of €4 per €1,000.

What is “contributing substantially” to the upkeep of a child?

Monetary Contribution: If you are paying maintenance for a child of an amount equal to or greater than the current increase for a qualified child. For current rates and further information visit www.welfare.ie

Contribution in kind: If you have care of the child(ren) for some period/s during each week e.g. regular visits by them. An increase for a dependent child may be payable in such cases if the cost of expenses incurred by you equates to an amount equal to or greater than the current increase for a qualified child.
